Reading and Writing V. S. Naipaul,2000-02-28 I was eleven no more when the wish came to me to be a writer and then very soon it was a settled ambition But for the young V S Naipaul there was a great distance between the wish and its fulfillment To become a writer he would have to find ways of understanding three very different cultures his family s half remembered Indian homeland the West Indian colonial society in which he grew up and the wholly foreign world of the English novels he read In this essay of literary autobiography V S Naipaul sifts through memories of his childhood in Trinidad his university days in England and his earliest attempts at writing seeking the experiences of life and reading that shaped his imagination and his growth as a writer He pays particular attention to the traumas of India under its various conquerors and the painful sense of dereliction and loss that shadows writers attempts to capture the country and its people in prose Naipaul s profound reflections on the relations between personal or historical experience and literary form between the novel and the world reveal how he came to discover both his voice and the subjects of his writing and how he learned to turn sometimes to fiction sometimes to the travel narrative to portray them truthfully Along the way he offers insights into the novel s prodigious development as a form for depicting and interpreting society in the nineteenth century and its diminishing capacity to do the same in the twentieth a task that in his view passed to the creative energies of the early cinema As a child trying to read I had felt that two worlds separated me from the books that were offered to me at school and in the libraries the childhood world of our remembered India and the more colonial world of our city What I didn t know even after I had written my early books of fiction was that those two spheres of darkness had become my subject Fiction working its mysteries by indirections finding directions out had led me to my subject But it couldn t take me all the way V S Naipaul from Reading Writing

Hopps, Elaine Pinderhughes, Richard Ashok Kumar Shankar, 1995 This much needed book provides an in depth and comprehensive look at both the helpful and problematic aspects of social work with overwhelmed clients those who live in transgenerational poverty and often have a history of little or no employment family violence substance abuse truancy and teenage pregnancy What approaches if any make a difference in the lives of these struggling patients To answer this question the authors follow fifty cases in each of five agencies They examine each client s problems the intervention approaches used by clinicians and the outcomes of these treatments both positive and negative The authors also examine the environment in which the clients live and its effect on their behavior In addition to evaluating the resources and constraints inherent in various agencies the authors also examine the seemingly dysfunctional national policies and programs which although they are set up to address and correct the problem of overwhelming poverty too often merely reinforce these detrimental conditions Special attention is also given to the roles that welfare programs coping skills self esteem authority discrimination power and powerlessness ethnicity and race play in the effectiveness of social work for these clients The authors include a rich variety of examples and cases that illustrate which clinical strategies used by individual social workers are most effective with overwhelmed clients The Power to Care will be invaluable reading for educators clinicians agency directors and policymakers who are currently reassessing programs geared to helping this population
